The Dynamo Is at Work
Do You Understand Finance?
Oil Drops—Gasoline Not A Zone for Preachers

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

A. D. Lasker, well known on the Chicago lake front and the shores of the Pacific, Atlantic and Mediterranean as a human dynamo, is chosen head of the Shipping Board.

All the anti-cruelty societies should interest themselves at once in the other members of the board and the President should start making lists to fill vacancies. The board will find Lasker a fierce pace-maker.

The world is wondering whether Germany can pay the indemnity. And at Washington statesmen predict an annual budget, beginning next year, of seven thousand million dollars.

That is more than four times the annual German indemnity payment. It is fourteen times what this government used to spend in days called horribly extravagant.

Foreign exchange is going to pieces, and the world seems to be learning something about finance in a rather painful way. Just what money is, and how to manage it on an international basis, no one seems to know exactly. England and France are collecting billions in gold from Germany, and English and French money drop.

Gold is shipped to the United States by the wagon load. The value of the dollar goes sky high. And we have hard times because no nation can afford to buy our goods and pay with such expensive dollars. You see France and England proceed to collect from Germany several times as much gold as there is in the whole world, while French and English currency drops in value. It is puzzling to those who thought finance was an exact science.

Crude oil drops to $1.36 a barrel, lowest in many years. Gasoline does not drop. You were told gasoline went up because crude oil was expensive. What will they tell you now? Something convincing, doubtless. The real reply would be: "A few of us control the supply and the distribution. We want your money and we are going to get it."

It would be possible to cut the price of gasoline in two, thus reviving the automobile industry and employment of labor. But that won't be done. Experience proves that when monopoly or combination prevents competition there is no protection from profiteering under our system of "popular government."

Pittsburgh clergymen write a letter of defiance to the Employers' Association. Some clergymen have been taking Christianity seriously, almost literally, and have aroused employers who do not wish discontent among the workers. The Employers' Association, it seems, has suggested a mental, "neutral zone" to which clergymen should confine themselves in preaching.

You can understand New York detectives warning criminals that they must not be caught in the final act, one, south of Canal street. But to prescribe preaching and talking zones for clergymen, who represent the power that drove out the money changers, seems very modern. The next step would be to write out sermons for the preachers, to be learned by heart and recited, as the prime minister writes the king's speech from the throne.

Colonel House says Germany is on a good business basis. Wirth, as minister of finance, piled up money and securities with which Germany can now meet her obligations.

Curiously enough, Germany's financial soundness is due largely to the British fleet. That fleet enforced the blockade, making it impossible for Germany to spend her money or run into debt with outside nations. Then, while the Allies owe us ten thousand million dollars and owe billions to each other, Germany, apart from the indemnity, is in debt to no one, except her own citizens. She is not allowed to keep an army or navy. What she saves on army and navy will pay her indemnity. A million of her young men who would be drafted into the army and navy ordinarily will build up her industries, prosperity and population in their homes.

And in the meanwhile France keeps a standing army of a million men. Poland an army of seven hundred thousand, the Allies spend billions on warships and armies. Germany will get rich paying the indemnity, and the Allies are in a fair way to bankrupt themselves watching and protecting Germany, while she pays the money.

War, victory and defeat work out strangely. A few years from now the country that lost may prove to have won.

Julia French Geraghty Says She'll Wed; News to 'Fiance'

Reports from Newport, R. I., were received in this city today to the effect that Julia Estel French, former wife of "Handsome Jack" Geraghty, had announced her coming marriage to Howard Williams, a Boston insurance man.

Mr. Williams, interviewed by the Boston American today, declared that the former Mrs. Geraghty never told him about the engagement and that he never knew it.

According to the dispatches from Newport, Miss French made the announcement to her mother, Mrs. Le Roy French, and her grandmother, Mrs. Stuyvesant Le Roy, when she visited them at the family residence on Red Cross avenue.

She is further said to have confided the news to friends at Newport, and to have stated that she and her new husband would live at Wahan, Mass., following their marriage next September.

"I never knew I was engaged to Mrs. Geraghty," said Williams today. "I never heard it from her lips or those of anyone else. I never believed in it at all. Julia, at any rate, never told me. But if I ever do become engaged to the lady we will announce it in good time.

"Yes, indeed, I do know her and admire her greatly. Beyond that I cannot say."

Julia French was divorced by Geraghty in Paris, shortly after their elopement some years ago. He then married Amy Biddle, daughter of a well known family, in Los Angeles, where the Geraghtys are making their home. Dispatches from that city a few days ago told of the birth of a son to the present Mrs. Geraghty.

COLLEGE GIRLS AT SACCO TRIAL

Matrons Ply Needles as They Listen to Testimony in Murder Case

The college girls craned their necks to take in everything as it was their first experience at a murder trial.

Dr. George B. Magrath, Medical Examiner of Suffolk County, resumed his testimony under the examination of Assistant District Attorney Harold D. Williams, explaining in detail the autopsies on the bodies of the slain paymaster and his guard. There were two bullet wounds in Parmenter's body and four in the guard's. The bullets taken from the bodies were steel jacketed and of 32 calibre.

11 IN CRASH OFF SABLE ISLAND

British Freighter Seapool Rams Iceberg; All on Board Thought Safe

The British freighter Seapool collided with an iceberg off Sable Island, Nova Scotia, and at 11 a. m. today was reported sinking.

A radiogram picked up and relayed by the Ottercliffs, Maine, station just before noon said the Seapool was proceeding slowly despite the water in her hold. The Cunarder Orduna was about 250 miles ahead of the Seapool.

It was believed from this message that the Seapool would not go down for some time, if at all, and that in any event, all on board would be saved.

It was supposed that ships were standing by the Seapool, as she was in the steamer lane, but their names were not known.

Boston shipping men say the accident is comparable to the Titanic disaster.

The last message from the doomed freighter was the following, registered at the Charlestown Navy Yard: "Just struck Iceberg. Somebody near please answer. Ship thought to be rapidly sinking."

The wireless was unsigned. It was by other means that the Seapool was identified.

The Seapool is a steel steamship of 4,502 tons. She sailed from Montreal June 2 for Dublin.

Boston shipping men believe her to be loaded with grain and other natural products of Canada.

Allen should be removed for his failure to provide the protective committee with information, Doherty maintains.

Governor Cox agreed with the committee that the depositors were entitled to certain information and it was supposed the bank commissioner would furnish it.

BUTCHER FIRST TO DISCOVER MARY GARDEN'S TALENT

The second installment of Mary Garden's picture of her own life as sketched by the famous opera singer herself for the readers of the Hearst newspapers as given below:

"Unlike most girls, I never owned a doll! I hated them—just as I have always hated imitations of any sort. They weren't real to me—and I loathed 'playing at' anything.

"My sisters were perfectly maxaclin about theirs, and I used to get furious at the way they would waste their time with them.

"In those days it was quite a fad to have a large collection of paper dolls of every size and description. My sisters had gathered theirs from every available source, and no one in the house had a chance against the beastly little things.

"One day, I remember it very vividly, I wanted to go for a walk. I pleaded and coaxed and threatened, and not one of them would budge away from their silly play. I went out and walked for blocks with my head in the air and my Scotch temper rising furiously.

"When I returned the girls had found some new diversion and I went straight to the playroom, took a pair of scissors and cut off the head of every one of the thirty-six dolls they had.

"That was a wicked thing to do, but even now I can feel the fiendish thrill it gave me. Those dolls had been an obstacle in my path—and they had to be removed—so I removed them!

"My sisters and I went to school at Hyde Park, but I can't say that those days made much of an impression on me. I loathed arithmetic and most of my other studies, except geography and my lessons on the violin.

"I never will forget the excitement of the school entertainment we gave at Hyde Park when I played 'The Bohemian Girl' in all its variations.

"Our whole family was walking on air over my public appearance, and, of course, our audience was ecstatic. But the next day came the real thrill. Our butcher came around himself to deliver the meat, and when mother spoke to him he said:

"'I tell you, Mrs. Garden, that daughter of yours is the finest fiddler I ever heard.'

"Mother was as thrilled she told all the neighbors about it, and, of course, I was pleased to death. It was my first adulation, and I instantly felt that I had a great future. The fact that the compliment came from our butcher didn't mar it in the least—for him, as now, all I asked of music was to stir a human heart.

"A curious thing in connection with this is that one day shortly after this I laid down my violin and never played it again. Was that caprice, or something more than that?

Then I said to my father, who was always a great sympathizer with my whims, and who, I think understands me best of all:

"Now, father, if you can afford it, I would like to take piano lessons."

"Well, after a good deal of plotting between us father went out and bought me a beautiful piano. My joy then knew no bounds and I threw myself with all my fervor into my piano lessons.

"Before a year I played Chopin and Grieg, composers I love the best, and I never grew weary of them. I would often shut myself in a room and play seven hours without intermission. I abandoned myself completely to the piano, and I progressed so rapidly that every one I knew was hectic over my career as a pianist.

"Then fate gave another turn to the wheel. A short time later I closed my piano and never went back to it again.

"Meanwhile my father had met a Mrs. Robinson Duff. She was a friend of a great friend of my father's, Colonel Pope of the Pope Manufacturing Company, who was in those days the largest manufacturer of bicycles in the United States.

"I was a great favorite of Colonel Pope's and one day he said to my father:

"'Why don't you send Mary to take vocal lessons from Mrs. Duff?'

"Father said it had never occurred to him and that I had never suggested it. He talked to me about it then—father was such a dear, indulgent dear!—and I was so excited about it we went right down to see Mrs. Duff.

"I remember as though it were only yesterday. I played and sang 'Annie Laurie' and 'The Queen of My Heart' from a comic opera of the period.

"'I must have her,' said Mrs. Duff as soon as I had finished, and so began my singing career.

TRAFFIC TIED UP BY TROLLEY FIRE

Defective Feed Wire Starts Blaze on Car Crossing East Cambridge Viaduct

Passengers on a crowded inward-bound Highland avenue car were badly frightened and traffic across the East Cambridge viaduct was tied up for half an hour today, when a fire started on the roof of the car.

The fire was discovered when the car was halfway across the viaduct, and two men from the nearby tower rushed to the scene with a hand fire extinguisher.

The fire, caused by a defective feed cable, it was said, burned itself out without igniting the rest of the car.

Pueblo, Col., June 8.—The huge masses of debris which have been piled in Pueblo's streets since last Friday were gradually melting today under the unceasing toil of thousands of laborers with the aid of giant caterpillar tractors and hundreds of motor trucks.

The task of cleaning up, however, is so monumental that it will be weeks before all the business streets are made passable.

The waters of both the Arkansas and Fountain rivers were flowing placidly in their normal channels, but great stagnant pools, in some places ten feet deep, could be seen in the low-lying sections.

The recovered bodies number about fifty, and estimates of the death toll continue to range between 100 and 500.

In property damage is conservatively estimated by local real estate men to be at least $15,000,000. Seven thousand persons are being fed in Red Cross stations and by the Salvation Army, Knights of Columbus and other relief organizations. Five thousand homeless are being given shelter. Money, food, clothing and bedding continue to pour into the city from all parts of the country.

INSTALL NICHOLS AS TECH HEAD

New President Sees Need of Better Relations of Labor and Management

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

President Nichols held a brief reception, after which luncheon was served to the guests in the faculty room of Walker Memorial.

In the evening there will be an alumni dinner, when President Nichols will speak. After that the alumni will attend Tech Night at Pops.

Dr. Dr. Nichols, in his inaugural address, said the two outstanding industrial problems today are the more intensive application of scientific knowledge and research to the processes and products of industry and the cultivation of more understanding and wholesome relations between labor and management.

He declared the true essence of successful industry is mutual respect between employed and manager, with willing co-operation, a sense of mutual opportunity and responsibility, and a shared personal or institutional loyalty.

Furthermore, he added, human relationships in industry we have now and always had, and whether recognized or not, they have caused quite as much trouble as purely economic conditions, for the state of a laborer's mind, more even than the state of his purse, determines his acts.

Dr. Elihu Thomson, acting president, in investing the new president with office, said that the Institute today may be regarded as an enduring monument to the labor and sacrifice of the late president, Dr. Maclaurin.

The new president was welcomed on behalf of the faculty by Professor Henry P. Talbot, who described the constitution as a "house in order."

PROBLEMS TO FACE.

Professor Talbot said the activities of the war enabled the public to discover that the college professor is a useful citizen. One material result of that discovery, he declared, was a closer contact and a better understanding between the members of college faculties and the leaders in industrial and engineering fields.

He said the new president came at a time when many problems of reconstruction remain unsatisfactorily solved, and that the faculty will look to Dr. Nichols for counsel and guidance.

Governor Cox welcomed Dr. Nichols not only as the head of the great institution, "but in these days of confusion I welcome you into the life of Massachusetts, knowing you to be a light-thinking, public-spirited citizen."

JOYCE SAYS RIVAL WAITED AS PEGGY BADE HIM FAREWELL

CLUBMAN'S MOTHER BROKE UP ROMANCE WITH ACTRESS

The second and last installment of the charges against Peggy Hopkins Joyce by her husband contained in his answer to her action for $10,000 monthly alimony, is published today and describes their honeymoon trip abroad.

They were very happy in Europe, doing the usual things and traveling with a rather fast set.

Presents of jewelry and fast motors continued, however, culminating in the $400,000 jewelry incident at Paris.

Mr. Joyce received a cablegram August 14, 1920, urging him to hurry back to America. He deposited letters of credit for $15,000 at a Paris bank for Peggy, pending his return.

They motored to Cherbourg and he set sail. It was on October 21, according to the bill, that he received proofs of Peggy's infidelity, while he was at Chicago.

A cablegram was dispatched to her and next day she, too, set sail for America.

It was the beginning of the end.

What he learned is set forth at great length in the answer, starting with the alleged affair with Harton French, which began at Hot Springs, Va., just before they sailed for Europe.

Peggy was with "Aunt Ida" and a maid, French, handsome, cultured—although dependent upon his mother for support—ate in the dining room at the Homestead Hotel. It was an innocent table flirtation.

A TABLE FLIRTATION.

Mr. French ascertained the name of the fascinating blonde and telephoned to her rooms, asking her to dine with him. According to the bill, the invitation was accepted at once.

Until she left, she was much seen in Mr. French's company and is alleged to have dined with him alone at his home.

Mr. French is said to have followed them to Europe, Peggy being informed of his impending arrival by Aunt Ida, who cabled:

"Harry Lehland, captain's cabin, Marconi line, aids."

Here was none other than Mr. French, according to the bill, which adds that she did "Marconi him" and met him at the dock when he arrived.

Then followed the Torquay incident, when she is alleged to have met him at the resort and spent 10 days—and nights—in his company.

ADMIRER THREATENED.

Other meetings followed, culminating in passports published in a New York paper as follows:

"Harry, in a way it puts at rest the rumor circulating in London and Paris for the past two months that Harton (referring to French) next matrimonial selection will quite likely be a matchless one about New York actress, at present the wife of an opulent Chicago gentleman."

French's mother, described as a "person of large and independent means," is alleged to have promptly ordered him home, under pain of being disowned.

French sailed for America July 28, 1920, out of the Peggy Joyce life.

The next adventure is alleged to have been with a certain Duc de Durcal, a Spanish grandee and member of the fast Parisian set.

TRYST WITH LETELLIER.

Relieved by the fascinating publicity, Peggy prepares to sink into oblivion, but not, however, before Gregory M. Gatlin, son of Lyden Gatlin, the famous Parisian actor.

Peggy met M. Letellier at L'Abbaye restaurant, Montmartre, Paris, in the latter part of July. Mr. Joyce was not with her at the time, although he was not introduced to the journalist. It was—something at first sight.

The supreme affoundary of their whole marital career Mr. Joyce charges, occurred the day of his sailing from Cherbourg.

M. Letellier is alleged to have journeyed secretly to Cherbourg, hiding in his automobile just around the corner from the docks where Joyce was bidding his bride farewell. Even as the millionaire mounted the gangplank, Peggy is alleged to have darted around the corner, hopped into Letellier's car, and they were off for Deauville, her maid trailing behind.

A TRIP TO VENICE.

The affair is alleged to have culminated in a journey to Venice.

They traveled at night, occupying the same compartment, and at Venice, after the first night, the same apartments. The Letellier affair caused the following item in a New York publication:

"At Deauville last Summer Jacqueline (a woman known to Paris) found her Don Juan (referring to Letellier) attentively entertaining a pretty New York woman (Peggy) and created some excitement by deliberately smacking the face of her wealthy friend."

Letellier then passed on.

Then came the impecunious Prince Vlora of Albania, the "Prince without a principality," one-time husband of Mrs. Helen Kelley Gould Thomas, wife of Frank J. Gould of New York, and later of Ralph Thomas, son of a sugar magnate.

The affair of E. James is alleged to have occurred in London.

AND THEN MAURICE.

The affair with Maurice also centered in London, while he was dancing at the Savoy Hotel.

The affair with Evans Spaulding is said to have begun since her return to America at New York and Palm Beach. Mr. Joyce asserts that many people have seen Mr. Spaulding in Peggy's apartment.

The affair, according to the bill, is still going on.

In support of his contention that Peggy's divorce decree was not signed when he married her January 23, 1920, Mr. Joyce cites telegrams alleged to have been exchanged between William Klein, her attorney, and Peggy and a friend.

SAYS SHE WAS PURSUED.

Mr. Joyce is perturbed because of an intimation contained in Peggy's cross bill to his suit for divorce to the effect that she was pursued and I couldn't get rid of him any other way. I decided the easiest way was to marry him."

Mr. Joyce introduces the following telegrams and letters to show that he was pursued, but she, five days after they met in June, 1919, is alleged to have received from New York as follows:

"Arrived safely on my train before. Did not know where to get you on phone. Write me Gotham Hotel. Lots of love.

"PEGGY."

ANOTHER SUICIDE.

Still another army man is said to have figured in her life, but if there were such a person no one could be found today who would identify him. It was recalled by persons who know Peggy that she was a close friend of Sergeant Alexander McClintock, who was found dead in a Turkish bath two years ago. An army pistol was at his side.

One familiar with the friendship between the army man and Peggy said:

"For some time before the death of Sergeant McClintock, Peggy and the soldier were constantly together. They were always restaurants and were frequently seen on the dance floor of cabarets. On many occasions Peggy spoke about her unfortunate

"Young McClintock was madly in love with Peggy and tried to keep up the pace set by some of her former admirers. After his money was gone his cowpuncher pals were much together. McClintock had told his friends that he hoped to marry Peggy as soon as she was divorced."

WISER AND NOT POOR.

Mr. Joyce asserts that he is a man of means still, despite Peggy's depredations, possessing $2,898,000 according to an inventory made March 31 of this year, although obligations contracted by her will keep him "poor-rich" for years.

Peggy, he asserts, is "sitting pretty" as to finance, listing various sums received from him, and which she appropriated, including the $15,000 he left at a Paris bank for her when he sailed for America.

She is also in possession of the $200,000 Florida home, although he still owes $100,000 on it, and she has jewelry, clothing, furniture, furs and an equity in the $400,000 worth of unpaid-for jewelry at Cartier's, Paris.

The bill ends with the following words:

"This respondent (Joyce) believes, and upon such belief states, that neither said answer nor cross bill (filed by Peggy) is exhibited in good faith by petitioner (Peggy) or with any idea of prosecuting the same."

(The End.)

Arrest of Fourth Woman in Kaber Murder Near

Mrs. Eva Katherine Kaber, accused of murdering her husband, wealthy publisher of Cleveland, O., in July, 1919.

Miss Marian McArdle, nineteen-year-old Smith College girl, held, together with her mother and grandmother, in connection with the murder of her stepfather.

By International News Service.

New York, June 8.—Through a clew obtained in a pawnshop the police believed today that they were not on the trail of the man who had sold his services as the actual murderer of Daniel Kaber, a wealthy publisher, at Cleveland, Ohio.

This man is alleged to have been hired by one or more women to stab Kaber to death. Women are figuring more and more conspicuously in the crime. With three women under arrest, two in this city and one in Cleveland, the police expected to arrest a fourth woman if they can find the actual stabber.

The pawnshop clew consists of a razor bearing a curious oriental inscription. It is said to be identical with a razor which disappeared from the Kaber home in Cleveland at the time of the murder and the police believe it is the same one.

Chief of Police Christensen of Lakewood, the Cleveland suburb where the murder occurred, is due here today to take Miss Marion McArdie and her mother back. Miss McArdie, who is nineteen years old, and who left Smith College to become a chorus girl, has been confined in Tombs prison since her arrest. Her mother, Mrs. Eva Katherine Kaber, wife of the slain man, is still in Police Prison. The girl's grandmother, Mrs. Mary Brickel, aged sixty-nine, was held in $10,000 at Cleveland after pleading not guilty to a murder charge.

DECKER SEEN AT NEGRO'S HOUSE

Officials Say Stockbridge Man Was There on Night He Was Slain

Stockbridge, June 8.—Officials investigating the murder of Louis C. Decker, superintendent of the Bombay Hill estate, declared today they had evidence to contradict the statement of Clarence Williams, colored, that the white man was not in his house.

According to State Highway Inspector Thomas Kletchka and Officer George Stannard of Stockbridge, Decker drank dandelion wine with the negro Sunday afternoon and again visited his shack in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Van Zandt of Cherry Hill said they saw Decker going toward the Williams house at about 1:30 o'clock Monday morning, and heard him knock twice on the door.

Williams was arrested on a technical charge and held under heavy bail, following the discovery of Decker, lying unconscious, face down, on the Cherry Hill road.

According to his widow and his daughter, Mrs. Nobie Huggins, Decker left the Williams house at about 2:30 a.m. and when he left he was drinking with Williams Sunday afternoon. In the evening he again left the house, stating he was going to call on neighbors.

Finnegan, John McCrossan, John Mooney and David E. O'Donoghue, all of Somerville. Burial was in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

'QUEENIE' AGAIN SEEKS DIVORCE

Former Wife of Rufus Gaynor Asks Separation From Her Third Husband

Mrs. May Gammans, well-remembered as "Queenie" Sanford, and later as the bride of Rufus Gaynor, son of the ex-Mayor of New York, is seeking separation from her third husband, Nelson Gammans.

The application will be fought before the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York.

Apparently the feeling between the Gammanses is mutual, for the husband has brought suit for divorce in the courts of Porto Rico, his present home.

"Queenie" Sanford, later Mrs. Rufus Gaynor, later still Mrs. Nelson Gammans, had her first experience with matrimony in Somerville in 1905, when she married Salvatore Guiffre. She was then sixteen years old. Her husband was considerably older. He obtained a divorce from her in 1909.

She had been born May Oddo. Between the time she married Guiffre and the time she divorced him she became a well known figure in Boston theatres and cafes. May, otherwise "Queenie," was married to Rufus Gaynor in 1911. In other words, before she was divorced from Guiffre.

That fact is being used against her by her present husband, Gammans, as it was by Gaynor, who had his suit in Reno by her annulled on the ground that she had a husband living. The Gaynor divorce suit brought out many interesting facts. The girl testified that William J. Gaynor, ex-mayor of New York, paid her money not to contest the annulment action.

Mrs. Gammans now maintains that while her husband has an income of $5,000 a year he prefers to live in Porto Rico and leave her to the charity of her brothers.

TO ASK WARRANT FOR POLICEMAN

One-Armed Veteran Says Officer Made Attack Without Provocation

Michael J. McLoughlin, thirty years old, of No. 92 C street, South Boston, a one-armed overseas veteran of the World War, will appear in the South Boston Court tomorrow morning with his counsel, Captain John J. Murphy, and ask for a warrant for the arrest of Patrolman O'Hanlon on the charge of clubbing him on the face and head with a club on the evening of May 31.

McLoughlin alleges that he was standing near his home when O'Hanlon accosted him and without any provocation struck him with the club and later placed him under arrest on the charge of drunkenness. He alleges that he received several scalp wounds and a broken nose and was unable to defend himself because the officer held his arm while pounding him with the club.

The South Boston draft board accepted McLoughlin for army service despite the fact that he had only one arm and he was assigned to duty with the Twenty-eighth Infantry in France, performing special duty. He is well-known in the Peninsula district.

O'Hanlon is one of the new members of the police force and has been diligent in rounding up alleged malefactors of the law.

ADAMS OF IOWA G. O. P. CHAIRMAN

By International News Service.

Washington, June 8.—John T. Adams of Iowa was elected chairman of the Republican National Committee here today at the first meeting of the full committee since the Chicago convention a year ago. Ralph Williams of Oregon was made vice-chairman. Postmaster-General Will H. Hays presented his resignation as national chairman soon after the committee met today and the election of Adams was accomplished forthwith as a matter of course and without opposition.

Thanks Boston American for Veterans' Victory

I have just finished reading the editorial on the Soldiers' Bonus in the Boston American of this date and hasten to extend to the Boston American and to you, as its editor, my congratulations on another great victory for the veterans who are now confined to the various hospitals and convalescent camps throughout the country.

Just prior to the reading of your editorial I received official notice from Colonel C. R. Forbes, director of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance at Washington, notifying me of the continuation of the book service in the hospitals.

When the order to discontinue the furnishing of books by the American Library Association was first issued it was the Boston American which raised protest against the discontinuance of this very valuable and absolutely necessary work for the welfare of the boys in the hospitals.

Please, sir, accept the humble thanks of myself and my comrades of the American Legion on this victory. It is but one more honor on the long list of accomplishments which the Boston American has been instrumental in having realized in behalf of the veterans of the recent war.

To you and to your splendid staff I say congratulations and good luck.

Very sincerely yours,
JAMES T. DUANE,
Commander Mass. Dept., the American Legion.

Gloucester, June 8.—That there is evidently no intention of abandoning the prize schooner Esperanto, now resting at the bottom of the sea on a sand bar off Sable Island, was further indicated when a representative of a New York salvage concern met representatives of the firm owning the schooner at the Board of Trade and preliminary negotiations entered into which may result in the famous Gloucester sail fisherman again being pressed into service to float the ship won by her from the Lunenburg schooner Delawanna last November.

Prosecutor Quizzes Woman About Arsenic

Cleveland, O., June 8.—Satisfied that he is well on the way to clearing up the essential facts in connection with the stabbing of Daniel Kaber, wealthy Lakewood publisher, on July 18, 1918, Prosecutor Edward C. Stanton and his assistants today are now delving into the mystery of the large quantity of arsenic found in Kaber's stomach in the medical examination following his death.

With this end in view the prosecutor today questioned a woman brought here from Sandusky.

"This witness has knowledge vital to the prosecution," said Stanton today, but refused to reveal where or how this knowledge had been obtained, although indicating that it was among the list of those who had administered arsenic to the helpless invalid. Clews indicating the whereabouts of the missing silverware were chased down without avail.

DENY THAT HARRY THAW HAS ESCAPED

Philadelphia, June 8.—A report coming from New York that Harry Thaw, Pittsburgh millionaire slayer of Stanford White, had escaped from the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane, known as Kirkbride's, was today authoritatively denied by Dr. D. H. Fuller, superintendent of the institution. "Thaw is here now and has been here constantly since his commitment," said Dr. Fuller. "So far as I know he has never attempted to escape."

RELIEVES PAIN BY SUGGESTION

Dr. Keller of New York Tells Physicians of Experiments. Dr. Coriat Objects

The practical use of methods of relieving illness through the power of suggestion was demonstrated today in Paul Revere Hall by many noted physicians of the American Medical Association.

The use of a piece of felt in a shoe, to give relief to painful feet, acting through the power of suggestion, was spoken of by Dr. Henry Keller of New York, who has had a large experience in using different methods of diverting the patient's attention from himself.

"It worked well," said Dr. Keller, "for the man told me afterwards that he was greatly relieved."

"Then I give a man a thorough examination, often though there may be no demand for it, but it gives the patient the experience that he is going through something that will make him well."

Dr. Isador H. Coriat of Boston strongly objected to the use of suggestion upon patients. "Suggestion is nothing else but a form of transfer. It does not do much good. The only is what we are coming to acknowledge," he said.

Dr. Charles Mayo of Rochester, Minn., the noted surgeon, objected to delays in operating upon patients.

"Risk comes through neglect and in the breaking down of the nervous system through waiting. Patients waiting for operations," he said. "We must operate before the nervous system has been shot to pieces."

Dr. Arthur S. Hamilton of Minneola pleaded for better graduate training for those taking up nervous and mental diseases.

Total	$6,000

This Test is open to residents of New England and Canada. Whether you are fifteen, fifty or ninety, makes no difference. Nobody is going to ask what ticket you vote, what church you attend, whether your taxes are paid, whether you are married or single.

You pay nothing, promise nothing, subscribe to nothing.

WIDE OPEN TO ALL.

It is so wide open, so utterly free of the pay-as-you-enter, that you may take part in it without purchasing a single copy of the Boston American.

Permit us to make this last as plain as can be. Ten, fifty, one hundred, five hundred persons, may take part in this $6,000 contest by studying the List of Titles in the Boston American bought by any one of them and by making tracing or free-hand copies of HIS Test pictures. All the members of a family may take part and each send in a separate parcel of Test Pictures (and Titles), but only one award will be paid to one family.

The First Day of the new Test is the day of all days when you should read the Rules of the Test. They tell you everything you need to know about it.

One of the things to take special notice of on the opening day is that you are not to send in your Test Pictures and Titles before the close of the Test. Hold them! Clip today's picture. Clip today's List of Titles. Write below the picture the title you think is the Correct Title.

You may use pencil, pen or typewriter.

READ THE RULES.

You may, if you wish, clip the title from the printed List of Titles and paste that on.

If you prefer to write, and find that news-print paper does not hold ink very well, you may paste the picture upon paper of better quality and write below it on the better paper.

The List of Titles printed today may remain standing three days or one week. Another may be substituted for it at any time and without notice. Please bear in mind that the Boston American's only guarantee in respect to the List of Titles is that—every day—today's List of Titles includes the Correct Title to today's Test Picture.

In the coupon printed below the picture you are asked to give your name and address, being careful to designate city or town and State. You may write this information on better paper in the same way, if that is your preference.

The Title Test Editor feels that he has told all you need to know about the Test at this time; assuming, of course, that you have read, or now will read, the Rules of the Test.

He realizes, however, that he is looking at this interesting game, or entertainment, from the inside. If, having read the Rules, you imagine something in the Test concerning which you desire further information, it is yours for the asking.

Address Title Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Anonymous letters cannot be considered. When writing, be sure to give your name and address. If your query can be answered in the paper, only your initials will be printed. If your letter calls for a reply by mail, be careful to send stamped and self-addressed envelope. The Test Editor is never too busy to answer letters and is grateful for suggestions, always. If the new Test proves ten times more entertaining, many times more interesting and much more successful than its predecessor, it will be due in large part to the suggestions of readers.

MOVIE TITLE WINNERS.

In the $5,000 Movie Play Title Test recently closed—the List of Winners in that Test will be printed in ten or eleven days — the Test Editor commented on an occasional Test Picture. In the present Test he will be silent. If he cannot help, he at least will be careful not to hurt. The Test Pictures and the List of Titles will speak for themselves; participants will do the rest.

Well, here another look at Test Picture No. 1. And a squint at the List of Titles. Found it? Sure? Satisfied? Be ready for No. 2, which will appear tomorrow!

MAKE SURE OF PAPER.

One word, about making sure of your Boston American every day.

This $6,000 Test is certain to attract thousands of new readers. YOU, indeed, may have come to us at the beginning of the previous Test. Or you may be "new" to us today.

Without delay, tell your regular newsdealer that you are going to want and must have the Boston American every day for at least 60 days. Leave a standing order with him.

There is no other way to be sure of keeping up with the Test from day to day, unless, of course, you can depend upon seeing the copy of a friend every day and want to go to the trouble of making a copy of his Test Picture.

Newsdealers, nowadays, order only the number of copies of a paper they know they can dispose of. The old law of supply and demand. The Test, doubtless, has attracted many new readers in your neighborhood. Unless the newsdealer has been advised of their interest he will be "short" of papers. The first time you hear his sorry, but I am all sold out of Boston Americans, may be the date of your enforced retirement. This office does NOT sell back numbers of the papers.

Speak to Mr. Newsdealer today. Be on the safe side.

The $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test is conducted by the Boston American ALONE. The Test Pictures will appear in NO OTHER NEWSPAPER. They will be printed on WEEK DAYS ONLY.

No other newspaper, in New England or anywhere else, does more for the entertainment, instruction and profit of its readers than the Boston American.

TO MAKE WAR ON "WET" DOCTORS

Harold D. Wilson, new State Prohibition Director, will not "lift the lid" the least bit in his administration. He told the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers' Association of New England he intended to respect the dignity of the druggist profession, but intended to go after those who room druggists and doctors profiting by the Volstead Act.

REFUSES TO SEE DESERTED WIFE

Eloping Church Treasurer Siver Rejects Pastor's Offer of Reconciliation

New Brunswick, N. J., June 8—Forty-eight-year-old Shubel K. Siver and his youthful second wife are back here today, where the churchman's first wife waited to forgive him.

Detective John Ferguson chaperoned the pair, who for nearly a month had walked in the woods of Northern New York and Vermont, holding hands and dreaming while the police looked for them and for the $6,200 in securities belonging to the First Reformed church, of which Siver was treasurer.

At Albany there was a dramatic meeting in the morning, when Siver met the Rev. Jasper S. Hogan, pastor of the First Reformed Church of New Brunswick. His mission was described as a mystery.

The Rev. Mr. Hogan bowed in dignified manner to Siver. The latter had been kept in utter ignorance of the pastor's intention to meet him and "Kitty" at Albany. He returned the greeting and presented "Kitty" as follows:

"This is my wife, Dr. Hogan."

The clergyman stiffened perceptibly. He seemed to ignore the formality for the nonce, but, taking his hat as though it were distasteful to him to do so, inclined his head over an slightly. He said:

"I will stay with the baggage while you are absent."

Siver had expressed a desire to replenish his supply of cigarettes, possibly a ruse to escape the keen surveying of his pastor. Wife No. 2 lost her customary smile and fled to the waiting room. Siver returned barely before the New York train stirred its wheels.

Siver, usually deliberately calm in his attitude, was grumbling.

"If he is here to tell me that I am welcome home, it is no go. I am in this to stay where I am, with my present wife. That is all settled. The rest is past history."

On the train the pastor engaged in conversation with the former church treasurer. The mouth was cupped on in low tones. "Kitty" was ignored for the most part.

In Manhattan the party took the shuttle for Times' square, then went downtown to the Pennsylvania Station and boarded their way to New Brunswick.

"Kitty" said:

"I will wait in New Brunswick to see what is done to my husband—for he is my really, truly husband—and then I will go to my mother's home in Perth Amboy. I will wait there until it is all cleared up, no matter how long a time it is."

The Rev. Mr. Hogan refused to be interviewed. He could not outline the policy of the church authorities in the case. His position as former spiritual adviser to Siver, he intimated, prevented him from uttering a single word. Siver and his wife also refused to talk.

But it is said on good authority that the minister presented the case of the first wife, and her willingness to sacrifice pride to bring the man back to his home.

But to all this, Siver, it is said, replied:

"I never can go back. I have taken this step, whether for better or for worse, I cannot turn this page backward. That is final."

Off for Outing at Nantasket

Boston Retail Automobile Dealers' Association was host for the day to the city's crippled, orphaned and destitute children.

2700 TOTS PLAY AT NANTASKET

Cripples and Orphans Guests of Boston Auto Dealers at Annual Outing

Nantasket Beach echoed with childish laughter today as never before when 2,700 crippled, orphan and destitute children of Greater Boston enjoyed their annual outing there as the guests of the Boston Automobile Retail Dealers' Association.

They left the city at 9 o'clock this morning, equipped with flags and horns, and riding in palatial automobiles. At noon, they gathered hungrily around a dinner of beef stew, bread and butter, cake, cookies, ice cream and milk, with allowances unlimited.

Then each piddle with a box of candy under his arm, they marched through Paragon Park and played on the beach to their heart's content.

Each received a big, shiny balloon and then said "Home, James," to their chauffeur.

The staff of 150 attendants and chauffeurs was also given a dinner, and they took part in the games on the beach afterward.

Fourteen years ago the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association organized the first of these annual outings and like all real good things it has grown and each year the Annual Children's Outing has received more and more generous support from the public under the guidance of Chester I. Campbell and many of those who supplied cars in the beginning have never failed to supply them each year, feeling that once a year it was their duty to make one day happy for so many children as possible.

Figures seem staggering when we stop some times to compile them. In the thirteen years of the children's outing, 29,281 children, 2,296 attendants and 5,625 drivers have been taken on this annual outing and returned to their homes.

However, if you have no car or if it was impossible to loan your car, will you help pay for the dinners, cape, horns and candy by sending in a donation in cash to Chester I. Campbell, No. 5 Park square, or telephone for further particulars Beach 3748.

Send that contribution today and help pay for the youngsters' outing at the beach.

In addition to helping to carry a record-breaking number of children, Vice-President Frank M. Archer of the Mixie company sent a truckload of Mixie on ice and a smaller car loaded with thousands of Mojo candymen for the children. He appointed thirteen men to represent his company in caring for the children who were carried down to the beach in Mixie trucks.

DEATH BULLETS AT SACCO TRIAL

Dr. Magrath Identifies Them as Those He Took From Victims' Bodies

In his opening address Mr. Williams said three of the bullets taken from Berardelli's body were 32-calibre, fired from a 32-calibre automatic pistol such as the defendant Sacco had on his person when arrested.

He said Sacco's automatic was loaded with ten cartridges at the time of arrest in Campello and that he had twenty-two more cartridges in his pocket.

During the recess the defendant Sacco's wife laughed and chatted with her husband, leaning over the steel cage as she did so.

The blood-stained clothing of both murdered men was introduced as evidence. Both defendants watched Dr. Magrath closely as he handled the undergarments and described where the bullets entered.

He modified his previous testimony as to the entrance point of one bullet in Berardelli's body after examining the clothing. He had not seen the clothing until today.

There were no powder burns on the clothing of either of the slain men, according to Dr. Magrath's testimony, which, he said, would indicate that all the shots were fired at a distance of more than ten inches from the men.

Counsel for the defence objected to a hypothetical question put to Dr. Magrath by Attorney Williams, who sought to show that Berardelli was in a kneeling position when fatally wounded. Attorney Williams was kneeling in front of the jury as he asked the question. Following a conference at the bench the defence won its point.

Dr. Magrath was briefly cross-examined by Attorney McAnarney, who brought out the fact that the witness could not tell from the clothing whether the shots were fired at three, six or twenty-seven feet.

The next witness was Dr. Nathaniel Hunting of Quincy, who found one of the bullets in Parmenter's body. He turned it over to the police after marking it. Dr. Hunting was not cross-examined.

SIMS' SPEECH IS PROTESTED

"Disgusting," "Gross Impropriety," Senator McCormick Tells President

By International News Service

Washington, June 8.—A protest against the speech made in London by Admiral Sims in which the admiral is reported as attacking the Sinn Fein and American support of the Irish freedom movement, was lodged with the President today by Senator Medill McCormick, Republican, of Illinois.

Senator McCormick declared the Sims speech was "disgusting" and a "gross impropriety".

He left a copy of the speech with Secretary Christian and asked that his protest be called to the attention of the President at the first opportunity.

Senator McCormick also called the matter to the attention of Secretary of the Navy Denby and predicted that disciplinary measures would be taken.

WEEKS WARNS U. S. NOT TO DISARM

New York, June 8.—Asserting there are feverish military preparations among nations with whom the United States "might possibly come in contact," Secretary of War Weeks, in an address here today, strongly urged the adoption of a national military policy which would enable us to avoid the costly blunders of the past.

Speaking at the commencement exercises of New York University, the Secretary pointed out that expanding populations made it inevitable that some nations should covet rich territories and declared it would be the height of folly for the United States to consider disarmament under present conditions.

Detroit Manufacturers Predict Steady Growth Through Summer Months

By J. J. CREMMEN
Automobile Editor

Detroit, Mich., June 8.—With the arrival of normalcy in automobile prices manufacturers here are growing and steady business in the Summer months which will in a measure balance the scant activities of January and February. The 1921 models have been splendidly patronized throughout the country.

The revived conditions have proved to manufacturers that motor transportation is essential in all business and individual progress—it has taken its place with food, clothing, shelter and fuel.

HAS SURVIVED CRISIS.

Because of this, automobile business has survived the greatest crisis in its history. Manufacturers having taken their losses, now face greater future business.

Dealers from all parts of the country are gathering here to learn first hand just what factory plans are for the future.

Nearly all manufacturers have worked off high priced materials and the much reduced prices of new materials plus the small production cost make the prevailing prices possible.

SEE GREATER BUSINESS.

The few manufacturers who haven't cut their prices are planning to put the saving in production into improvements that present car owners desire. Some manufacturers I have talked to regret the present disturbances in the industry but they see greater business and prosperity ahead for all concerned.

There are no labor disturbances in the industry except unemployment and that is gradually being taken care of, wages are being reduced in keeping with conditions without any severe protest.

In Akron, Ohio, the greatest tire manufacturing city in the world, conditions are much brighter now than at any time in the past year. Nearly all the big tire manufacturers have reorganized and refinanced and conditions are gradually returning to normal.

INCREASE IN BUYING.

Since the announcement of price reductions every manufacturer has noted a marked increase in buying activity on the part of the consumer. From all parts of the country, dealers are demanding immediate shipments to take care of the increased demand.

The huge stocks of tires carried over from last year by almost every manufacturer are wiped out and all are busily engaged making new stock to fill orders.

ASK MR. FIX IT

Dear Mr. Fixit: I have an operator's license. Can I drive my father's truck?
Hanover, Mass. J. N.

In order to drive a truck you must have a chauffeur's license.

Dear Mr. Fixit: I have an Overland Model 75, and I have had many repair men working on for the steering gear. I bought this car two years ago and can't get it to steer right. I have taken down the steering gear and put in all new parts and know that it is O. K. Ever since I have owned this car it has always had a tendency to sway from one side of the road to the other. Since new parts are in it has made it a little better. If there is anything you can suggest for me to do I would like to have you do so. You feel it more when going twenty-five or thirty miles an hour. The wheel turns about two or three inches. But it, the play in the steering wheel before it takes hold. I myself don't think it too much. This fella, the other on a steering gear too tight. Hoping that I shall hear from you soon, I will wait in reply in the Boston American.
Franklin, Mass. H. F. A.

In all probability you will not be able to remedy this trouble. We can only suggest that you try the following: Remove the cap over the steering arm and loosen up the bolt which draws together the top of the split shoulder which holds the steering arm. This holds the square shaft as you will notice. If you have loosened up the bolt you should be able to readjust the worm gear steering wheel so that the square axle will turn around and bring the square surface into a different position, in reference to the split shoulder which holds the shaft. This will change the worn surfaces and may help you. Also tighten up your eccentric bushings which will cause the teeth of your steering gear to mesh more closely. This is all you can do unless you buy a different model front end which would be very expensive.

Dear Mr. Fixit: When you apply for an operator's license what kind of a car do you need to bring, a passenger car or a truck? Or can you have either?
Boston, Mass. M. A.

You must drive the kind of a car which you desire a license for; that is, if you want a passenger car license you must drive that, for a truck you must drive a truck. If you want a license for a Ford, which is a special license, you must drive a Ford, or if you are going to drive a Packard-Twelve you must drive that on a truck in that type. You cannot use a passenger car operator's license to drive a truck or vice versa.

Dear Mr. Fixit: Have you a road map for motorists taking in Boston and vicinity and the Cape?
Holbrook, Mass. H. C. J.

If you will write to the Goodrich Tire Company on Boylston street, Boston, I think they can furnish you with the map you desire.

Dear Mr. Fixit: I own a 1917 Lexington Model G. She runs very nicely on level ground, but burns an awful lot of gas. She doesn't make more than six or seven miles to a gallon. She also chokes going up hills. Now can you advise if there is any way I can fix it?
Boston, Mass. L. B. H.

Your trouble seems to be due to the carburetor. The very fact that you do not get greater mileage would indicate this. Would advise you to go to the service station of either the Lexington Automobile Company or take your car to the service station of the carburetor which you are using and have it properly adjusted. You ought to get almost double that mileage. Also be sure that your muffler is not choked up with dirt.

RETAIN EXPERTS FOR HIGHWAY

United States Rubber Backs Building of Ideal Section in Lincoln

The Lincoln Highway Association has announced the names of the experts retained to collaborate in the final detailed design of the Ideal Section which is soon to be built on the Lincoln Highway, the funds being provided by the United States Rubber Company.

The letting of the contract for the construction of the Ideal Section has been placed in the hands of Lockwood, Greene & Company, engineers, of Boston, among the founders of the Lincoln Highway Association.

This firm has been engaged in the building of large industrial and commercial projects of note throughout the country.

EXPERT TO AID.

In charge of the final design of the Ideal Section, collaborating with Lockwood, Greene & Company, will be W. G. Thompson, consulting highway engineer and late State highway engineer of New Jersey.

Mr. Thompson is well known throughout the country as an acknowledged authority in highway building. He was for ten years a member of the corps of engineers which, under General Goethals, built the Panama Canal.

Mr. Thompson has been from the first a member of the Lincoln Highway technical committee, which decided upon the general specifications for the Ideal Section and is intimately acquainted with all phases of the educational plan.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT.

That the beautification of the Ideal Section may be of the same high standard as the construction work on the road itself, Jens Jensen of Chicago, who is known as one of America's leading landscape architects, has been engaged.

Mr. Jensen completed extensive studies in his profession abroad, coming to the United States from Denmark in 1881. He is a governing member of the Chicago Art Institute, a member of the board of directors of the Chicago Geographical Society, president of the Friends of Our Native Landscape, and a fellow of the American Geographical Society.

The detailed designs and plans prepared for the section will be made public as soon as completed, and the actual construction will be undertaken as soon as possible.

Breaks Skull in Fall

Worcester, June 8.—Clement Rouleau, seventy-six years old, of 59 Orient street, was probably fatally hurt when he fell twenty feet in a building under construction at No. 3 Tower street. He is in City Hospital with a fractured skull.

5 NEAR DEATH IN CRASH

Touring Car Hurled 50 Feet by Train at Fernwood Crossing

Gloucester, June 8.—Tossed 50 feet in the air in the automobile in which they were riding, five residents of Prospect square, cottagers at Fernwood, had a miraculous escape from death on the Fernwood crossing.

George B. Low, driving a touring car containing his wife, a Mrs. Stickney and Mrs. Stickney's daughters, Helen and Marion, was proceeding to the Low Summer cottage at Fernwood when warned by the electric bell on the crossing of an approaching train. He stopped to let it pass. This was the down train from Boston, due in Gloucester at 6:22.

STARTS ACROSS TRACKS.

The American Express train, leaving here at 6:19, meets the inward train at the crossing, and evidently not knowing this, Low started his machine across the railroad tracks, thinking that the bell was being rung by the train just passed.

The express train, in charge of Engineer Jennings and Conductor Williams, rounded the curve and trapped the auto on the crossing. The machine and occupants were hurled a distance of fifty feet in the air.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL.

Albert P. Hubbard, a member of the Water Department, picked the passengers of the Low machine up and rushed them to the hospital.

Mrs. Stickney and her daughter Helen, are confined to the hospital, the former with fractured ribs and the latter with a fractured shoulder.

FIRE DAMAGES MEDFORD CHURCH

A fire in the Methodist Church on Otis street, Medford, today caused $500 damage. It is believed to have started from a gas jet left lighted all night in the Sunday school room. The fire was discovered by a neighbor, who saw smoke pouring out of the rear windows and turned in an alarm.

HUB GIRL MAKES HIT ON STAGE

Louise Brunell Was Formerly Feature of Mrs. Butler's May Festivals

Louise Brunell, the graceful dancer of "Up in the Clouds," would be better known to a multitude of Boston folk if she were using her real name, Louise Brown.

Miss Louise Brown was one of the clevenest of the child dancers in Mrs. Butler's Annual May Festival at Symphony Hall, and for four or five years she occupied an important place in those events so popular with children in this city.

GUARDED BY MOTHER.

Miss Brunell is only a few days out of the clutches of the Child Labor Law in Massachusetts, now having legally passed her sixteenth birthday. "Up in the Clouds" is her first big engagement. She is a fairly pretty blonde, fairly good looking, yet strong, and as guileless as any girl of her age, who is always closely guarded by a loving mother.

"Up in the Clouds" Miss Brunell has several important dances and one or two solos are quite difficult.

"They are both very exciting to me," said Miss Brunell, "as when I danced in the May Festival in the Fenway I came down from the room of Mechanics Hall on the corner of a big moon. It was a drop of forty feet and was tremendously thrilling."

CHANGED NAME.

"How did you happen to change your name from Brown to Brunell?" the dancers mother was asked.

"There were several quite famous dancers named Brown," she replied, "and we thought we should select something distinctive. Brune is the French of Brown, and we added the 's for euphony. That's all."

TWO WOMEN CLAIM WORCESTER MAN

Through the filing of a bankruptcy petition in the Federal Court against Harold L. Bordwin of Worcester, it was revealed that two women claim to be his wife. It is said one of the women was assigned by Bordwin an interest in his fathers estate, while the other has attached $3,000 worth of that interest in the hands of the administratrix.

ERROR GIVES ICE CREAM TO CHILDREN

Portsmouth, N. H., June 8.—A local ice cream firm inadvertantly played the role of Santa Claus for a crowd of Portsmouth youngsters last evening by delivering ice cream to the wrong address. Several gallons of ice cream were to be delivered to the Christian Church on Court street, but the driver left them on the steps of the rear of the Unitarian Church. Before the mistake was noticed the ice cream had been devoured by children in the neighborhood.

McDONALD HAS WILD TIME

Breaks Father's Knee, Whips Police, Trys to Hang Himself and Lands in Hospital

After a brief but spectacular career as an exponent of rough and tumble fighting, during which he damaged the East Boston police department, fractured his father's kneecap and attempted to hang himself, Joseph McDonald of No. 97 Bennington street, East Boston, was taken to the City Hospital today.

His next move, the police say, will be to the Psychopathic.

McDonald, who is twenty-eight years old, began his destructive work on Memorial Day. His father and brother, Mr. and Mrs. James McDonald, returned from a cemetery to find the house locked up. When his father asked for the key the police say James smote him hip and thigh and was dragged off only after the elder McDonald had sustained a fractured kneecap.

Last night Joseph attended a theatre directly opposite the police station. He became objectionable and Special Officer Murphy was called upon to eject him. A small-sized riot ensued, which ended only when Patrolman Driscoll and a specialist dragged him across the street to the station house. A short time later House Officer Meahan discovered McDonald attempting to hang himself with his shirt.

Meahan interfered and in the resultant melee McDonald bit one of Meahan's fingers nearly off. A squad of police came to the rescue and succeeded in getting McDonald to the Relief Hospital.

—Fresh From Paris—

PARIS, France.

THE sportswoman is planning her costume with more than a little thought this Summer, since each passing season finds a larger part of woman's time engaged in out-of-door pursuits. For the golfer who would combine smartness and comfort the reascence of the blazer is a veritable godsend, for with a white skirt—serge, linen or what you will—the striped blazer is just the thing. The model shown above, of white flannel, striped with cherry red, has a flat collar and revers and smart little applied pockets striped laterally. It is worn over a tailored shirt of white crepe de chine and a perfectly plain short skirt of white flannel.

A SMART Parisian, turned out for tennis the other day, in the frock of French blue linen sketched at the right. It is built along lines that invite sudden and extreme motion, from the looseness of the sleeves over the forearm to the easily fitting waist and wide skirt. Bands of white braid stitched with blue trim the frock and its satin lined flying scarf, which in moments of action is confined at the back of the shoulder by snaps.

AFTER 25 YEARS OF LAXATIVES—

A BREAKFAST FOOD PERMANENTLY RELIEVES

One of the prominent Bankers of New York City has written the President of the American Health Food Corporation as follows:

"New York, May 2, 1921.

Dear Sir:

I am extremely obliged to you for recommending Cereal Meal to me, as after twenty years of all sorts of Laxatives, this has done me more good than any of them. Kindly send me half a dozen boxes so that I will have a supply for the Summer.

Cordially yours,

W. K."

Cereal Meal is the result of the scientific experiments of a prominent Physician with the idea of providing the Intestines with those activities totally lacking in the average food of today, and which is probably the chief cause of the National prevalence of Constipation—for most Drugs are used with the mistaken idea of curing it that is either its combined.

Added to the most delicious and strengthening Grain and Wheat are food elements all purely vegetable, which do not detract from the appetizing flavor of Cereal Meal, but stimulate the Lower Intestine, give just the lubrication it requires and set up the peristaltic action which is absolutely necessary for perfect evacuation every day.

Though on the market but a short time, it is now being used in 4400 homes in the State of Massachusetts alone.

Cereal Meal can be obtained at the better Grocers and Druggists—if your's doesn't, the S. S. Pierce Co. of Boston will inform you where it can be obtained.

The strongest of guarantees goes with each package, for if you are not entirely pleased with Cereal Meal in every way, your dealer is authorized to refund the full purchase price, if you return the empty portion to him are unsatisfactory.—Advertisement.

'BROWNIE'S' LIFE STORY TOLD

Ex-Husband Reveals How He Married Her From House of Good Shepherd

names of business men she "entertained."

The story of Moses, ex-husband of "Lil" Kingston, alias "Brownie" Kennedy, was given exclusively to the Boston American.

MARRIED WHEN 17.

She married Moses when she was seventeen years old. She was at that time an inmate of the House of the Good Shepherd, Roxbury. Her earlier life reads like a romance. Much romance has been built about a "viciousness" less guileful than Lillian Kingston.

Daughter of a cultured English girl and a doctor, educated in the colleges and universities of Ireland, "Brownie" Kennedy began her career as a parasite on society when she was thirteen years old.

Her mother was dead. She was the sole "mother" of three younger sisters and a brother.

When she was sixteen her father had her committed as a stubborn child, and then her real downfall began.

Moses, who tells the story, is a well-to-do optometrist, and a former farmer's boy from Maine.

He tells the story of Stella or "Brownie" Kennedy, now known as Lillian Kingston, without malice.

CONFESSED AS EYE-BORN CHILD.

At the age of sixteen her father, Dr. Michael Kennedy, a well-known South End practitioner, now in England with his other four children, had "Brownie," who was then known only as Stella, placed in the corrective institution as a stubborn child, by court process. Her record as an inmate was of the highest.

When Moses, a friend of her childhood days, proposed marriage, a new world was opened to little Stella Kennedy. It meant freedom from the institution, a home of her own, new dresses, and, perhaps, travel. Mr. Moses still has sympathy for his former wife and has faith in her. He looks upon her as a victim of circumstances. He said she was the tool of evil companions, who used her to trap wealthy men.

MODEL WIFE FIVE YEARS.

Moses declared that Stella Kennedy was a model wife until their divorce in 1912. He felt that she had been pointed blacker than she really was and stands ready at any time to help her. He admitted that after she left him, the world looked black and that he was almost too discouraged for months to marry on his business. He allowed her to obtain a decree on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment and non-support.

Moses declares that her downward path soon after her marriage, when she visited resorts of questionable character to sell furs and clothing to the inmates. Lifelong friends of her mother warned her against the danger of trading in such an atmosphere, and to all she laughingly replied:

FASCINATED BY WEALTH.

"I guess Stella Kennedy ought to be smart enough to take care of herself. While it is not pleasant to meet these types of women, they buy liberally and pay cash, and they don't dicker over prices."

Her former husband says that she first fell into her evil ways while soliciting funds for the Free Home for Consumptives. He said she received 25 per cent. of what she collected and it brought her in contact with wealthy men of evil designs, who soon fascinated her and made her forget him and her humble home. He says she early exhibited the trait of tabulating the name and address of every business man she interviewed and feels that later she may have looked them up.

3 SISTERS, 1 BROTHER.

Stella Kennedy's mother was born in England. Her maiden name was Colville. She was highly educated. She spoke several languages. She had great plans for Stella's future, Stella being the oldest of the family of five.

Stella's father was graduated from a college in Ireland, where he took his degree in medicine and came over here when a young man. He began his practice in Boston on Massachusetts avenue, near Rockwood avenue. All the children are living. The other three daughters are Ida, Gladys and Muriel. The only son, Winston, is seventeen years of age. This is the boy who has been erroneously reported to be the son of "Brownie" Kennedy, who is thirty-one years of age, although having been wrongfully reported to be older. Ida is twenty-five. Gladys and Muriel are younger.

FATHER IN SCANDAL.

Neighbors of the Kennedys speak in the highest terms of Stella's parents and of the children. Dr. Kennedy was prosperous until he became involved in the death of a young woman patient, which resulted in threats of prosecution and his removal to England. He took Ida, Muriel, Gladys and Winston with him. They are all studying abroad. Relatives in this country are reported to be well-to-do. Dr. Kennedy recently inherited property in his birthplace in Ireland, according to recent letters. The value of the estate was not mentioned.

Mrs. Kennedy made all the dresses for the children. Neighbors say that they were the neatest children in the neighborhood. The death of Mrs. Kennedy was a severe blow to Dr. Kennedy and changed the entire scheme of Stella's life. It had been planned to send her to Notre Dame Academy, where one of her sisters later graduated with the highest honors, but her mother kept her home.

NATURAL BUSINESS WOMAN.

He was discouraged after the death of his wife and thought Stella was large enough to keep house, because she loved the children and would take better care of them than a stranger. Stella was musical and ambitious and would have profited from an academic education. She was a natural business woman, as her later exploits showed. She was a girl of lofty impulses until she started out on her soliciting career, when a change occurred in her so suddenly that it startled her husband and relatives.

THE MOTION PICTURE WORLD

By FRIEDA DAVIS

FROM the office of George B. Van Cleve, vice-president and general manager of the International Film Co., comes word of the Summer program of that concern. Mr. Van Cleve has acquired the Messmore Kendall studio in Astoria, Long Island, for Mr. W. R. Hearst's productions.

While the majority of film producers are cutting down their activities during the Summer months, the Cosmopolitan forces will be as busy as ever, in fact busier, since the enlarging of working space hints to more pictures. When I was watching the work in New York, International was then occupying its own studio in the Bronx, and most of Metro's New York studio, as well as locations galore. The large equipment on Long Island will make the work easier and swifter.

Several new productions will be started immediately. Arthur Somers Roche's "Find the Woman" will be the first to get under way in the new quarters. Reeta Owen, Ethel Duray and Eileen Huban will head the cast. Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf's "Beauty Shop" has been announced as the second picture. The cast for this has not yet been made public.

BERT LYTELL'S NEW FILM.

Source of Many Films

I CAN'T imagine what the movies would do without the Saturday Evening Post. Nearly half the pictures on the screen have the announcement "Such and Such" taken from the story by So and So in the Saturday Evening Post. Moreover, these pictures are always good.

The newest example is Bert Lytell's next feature, Julia, under the Metro publicity announcement begs that we make no pun on that—adapted from the short story by Kenneth Harris. This is a story of the early days in California. The continuity has been written by June Mathis, responsible also for the splendid scenario of "The Four Horsemen." Virginia Valli will appear with Lytell.

CECIL DEMILLE TROUBLED.

CECIL DeMille is only waiting to "shoot" the last scenes of "The Laurel and the Lady" before he takes the train East to have a talk with the Famous Players-Lasky heads. Now that the board of censors have barred such recurrences as a man kissing another man's wife and other such episodes that figure largely in DeMille's films, there is question as to how he can keep up his box-office drawing work to the best advantage.

It has been rumored that DeMille will start on a hubs costume picture, work at which he is remarkably successful. His scenarist, Jeanie MacPherson, has just returned from Europe with quantities of picturesque ideas for pictures.

JAMES KIRKWOOD: AUTHOR.

JAMES KIRKWOOD is not satisfied to work in five new pictures, he is also going in for author's honors. Already he is at work on a volume to be called "Stare I Have Directed—and Directors Who Have Directed Me."

The list of stars directed includes such names as Mary Pickford, Lionel Barrymore, John Barrymore, Antonio Moreno, Dorothy Gish, Blanche Sweet, Thomas Meighan, Jack Pickford, Owen Moore, Billie Burke, Henry B. Walthall and Mary Miles Minter. The list of directors include D. W. Griffith, Marshall Neilan, Allen Holubar, George Melford, Wesley Ruggles and Allan Dwan.

CAMERA CLICKS.

"THE ROSE of Washington Square" is the title of an original story by Doris Schroeder in which Carmel Myers will star. She has just finished filming "The Black Cap," a story of Wadsworth Camp, which appeared in Collier's Weekly.

HAZEL DALY, instead of Helene Chadwick, is to play opposite Tom Moore in "Beating the Game," which has just gone into production in the West Coast studio. This change was found necessary because Miss Chadwick has already been cast for "The Glorious Fool," which is also being "shot."

KATHLYN WILLIAMS, the ideal haughty and cold player of the films, is playing the role of Constance Llewelyn in the film version of the stage success, "A Virginia Courtship," which is being filmed at Realart.

DOROTHY ORTH, former Christie Comedy girl, plays the leading role in the new Vanity comedy being made by Scott Sidney. The picture has been called "Chicken Hearted."

Arbuckle and Viola Dana Star

"FATTY" ARBUCKLE made no mistake in leaving the slapstick field for comedy along more serious lines. Paramount has seen the possibilities of his playing and arranged a splendid program of film productions for his new venture. He has fulfilled their prophecy that he is not "too fat to fight" shy of the old slapstick "sags."

In "The Travelling Salesman" Arbuckle is a howling success. The only difficulty is in the story, adapted from the play by James Forbes.

Forbes' plays are stage plays only. It is hard to understand their real value without the spoken word. His slang, his breeziness of expression, his human type of conversation—all depend on the voices of the players.

True, he depends on the personality of the chief players to "put over" his idea, and "The Traveling Salesman's" personality fits Arbuckle like a glove, but the rest of the story is so inferior to the comedian and his work that it mars the production somewhat. Arbuckle's cheerfulness and acceptance of whatever comes is irresistible. He has cultivated mannerisms that bring a laugh each time they are used. He has brought none of the over-emphasized emotions of "rough comedy" with him, but grasps the significance of his part and manages it with subtlety and lightness. As for the film: "The Travelling Salesman" is "Fatty" Arbuckle.

Viola Dana's new story, "Home Stuff," is "Way Down East" without any punch. After seeing her in such productions as "The Offshore Pirate" and "Satan, Jr.," it's hard to recognize one's self to seeing her as a pathetic little barnstorming actress who returns to the cows and chickens. She is a Scott Fitzgerald heroine personified and should keep to those roles. Always effective, always interesting, even in "Home Stuff" she is likeable, but give her better stories and watch the box-office receipts go up—the movie producer's sure barometer.

STEAMSHIP HITS ICEBERG

Tremendous excitement was occasioned by the first word that a transatlantic steamship had struck an iceberg somewhere in the North Atlantic.

For a time some anxiety was felt for the French liner Rochambeau. The Rochambeau was confused with the Seapool owing to the fact that last night a radio was received by the French line here in somewhat fragmentary formfi reporting that the Rochambeau had sighted ice and was in trouble.

The last part of the message was later corrected to read that the liner was "avoiding trouble by taking a southerly course." The Rochambeau sent out a broadcast wireless warning to other ships about the presence of ice.

What made the report concerning the Rochambeau appear grave for a while was the fact that the French line had been unable to get into wireless communication with her after receiving the first message.

Later it was reported she was the Canard liner Saxonia, carrying 1,134 passengers, from Liverpool. Two other big across-the-ocean liners, all with heavy passenger lists, were in the iceberg lane today.

WIRELESS WORKING.

This theory was strengthened by the fact that the last wireless from the Seapool showed the apparatus in good order, and then the messages suddenly ceased. It is believed the wireless operator is devoting all his attention to the Ordunas.

While the nearest vessel, so far as is known, is the Ordunas, 250 miles away, Boston ship owners believe an unidentified ship is standing by. The Seapool is the property of the Pool Shipping Company, Ltd., of London. She was built in 1913 and sailed from Hartlepool, Eng. It is supposed her crew's list is large.

DOCTOR ACCUSED IN DRUG CASE

Columbus Avenue Physician Is Charged With Failing to Keep Proper Record

Dr. Johnson W. Hill, colored, was arrested today at his office on Columbus avenue on a secret Federal indictment charging him with failing to keep a proper record of his dealings in narcotic drugs.

He pleaded not guilty to the indictment in the Federal Court before Judge James M. Morton, Jr., who held him in $1,500 bail.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Keith, Dr. Hill has given prescriptions during the past seven months for 2,200 morphine tablets, or about 1,000 grains, while the average doctor generally prescribes not over twenty-five grains in an entire year.

A JORDAN MARSH MESSAGE TO MEN

"You Always Smile When You Say It!"

THAT is the way a Boston woman described her experiences in the Jordan Marsh store. And it made us smile again to hear her say it.

"I have been one of your customers for a good many years," she continued, "and I have always found that if what I purchase does not turn out 100% right you make it right without loss of my time, temper or dollars." Thus Madame quoted

One of Our Standard Slogans:

"If it isn't right it is made right."

This leads back to another of our fixed policies—every possible endeavor is brought to bear upon having the best of materials and workmanship in what we sell.

We are not satisfied with outside appearances only. Our buyers have been schooled into taking nothing for granted.

Every test is applied to get into the heart of things. Outside appearances are never accepted as final.

The Men Are Finding It Out

New England women have faith in this great store that is absolute. They have told of it at home so persistently and consistently that the men have given heed. The result is a tremendous volume of business with them directly—a business that is growing at a most satisfactory rate.

One reason the men come to us for so many wardrobe needfuls is that we have provided for them their own shops, many of them partitioned off. They are learning two things:

We make every endeavor to sell what is right, but if it doesn't turn out 100% right we make it right without quibbling.

AMERICA IS FIRST. In all things worth while. This is true of the making of auto tires. This country makes more tires than all the rest of the world. Above is shown the wonderwork of the business—vulcanizing. Through steam and hydraulic pressure the soft rubber is transformed into a tough, resilient tire, impervious to heat, cold or moisture. The tires in drums are put into these big heating molds and kept there for a brief time. The lower photo shows the finishing of a tire. The process is fascinating and the soft rubber grows into a valuable piece of merchandise under the skillful hands of the worker. Tire making is one of the business romances of America and one it has reason to be proud of. (U. & U.)

Here you observe one taking the place of horses or oxen in rural England, and making a good job of it, too. This is one of the few elephants to "go in for" plowing. (Key.)

COURAGE. In one of the greatest qualities in man, not exactly reckless daring, but that ability to fight down despondency and pessimism when handicapped by the loss of a limb or some faculty. Here is an example of happy courage. The loss of a leg doesn't seem to bother Sam Loyofsky, left, and Bruce Rankin, from enjoying a friendly boxing bout. Took place recently in New York. (U. & U.)

CUT OVER EYE MUCH BETTER

Champion Cuts Out Lunch and Is Eating but Two Meals Each Day Now

By Jack Dempsey

Heavyweight Champion of the World

Copyright, 1921, by the Boston Sunday Advertiser, Inc.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 8.—The cut over my left eye which forced me to cut boxing off my training program for four days this week, is rapidly healing and I may get back to work sooner than the doctor expected.

I find that I am inclined to pick up a little weight when doing only light work so I intend to look for some time to come I will eat only two meals a day, breakfast and dinner, fining in the lunch period with spurp.

• • •

This is the easiest way to reduce and still be able to keep my fighting edge. After a few days I'll start to get used to missing a meal but by exercising more will never be able to get along all right with two squares.

• • •

I did this once before when training for the toughest fight I ever had. This was a two-round affair with Johnny Sudenberg of Omaha, held at Goldfield, Nevada, in 1918. I went into the battle in great condition and it was lucky that I was in such fine trim, Sudenberg was one of those rough, rugged fellows with some cleverness and a lot more effective than I had. He floored me three times in those two rounds, and I was never more entitled to bear a hell rising than I was that day when the referee held up both our hands and called it a draw.

Later in the week I had him to [illegible] sparring partner. He was [illegible] decided to [illegible] Two of fighters I ever met.

Kearns couldn't remember his name but that won't matter if he can fight.

He walks so slow past a vacant lot that office buildings grow on it like asparagus.

Whenever you see a messenger walking fast you know he's on his way home

When he's hard at work you know he's either delivering a message or going to work

Of course, all messenger boys aren't slow, but the ones who rush haven't been working very long.

Everybody makes mistakes when they first get a job

But most of them are so slow that they won't even buy shirts with fast colors in them

Scion a has discovered how to get a message from New York to San Francisco in an hour, but it hasn't found out how to get it delivered in less than six hours

SENIOR GOLFERS RENEW YOUTH

Play Over Woodland Links Today; Glenna Collett Shows Fine Brand of Golf

By Robert E. Harlow

Miss Glenna Collett played the best golf of her career in the women's Eastern championship. The Providence player finished second in a field of many of the best Eastern women golfers in many previous tournaments she has played badly close in and on the greens. Her approach putts at Brookline were hit with confidence and for the most part were up to the cup

Miss Gordon made the mistake of figuring on a 6 at the ninth. This is a long hole and Miss Gordon is not a long hitter. She wanted to get home in three and pressed her drive, missing it. The ball shot into trees at the left and, fortunately, struck one, and bounced back into a playable spot. Miss Gordon needed two more to get on the fairway, then topped her fourth into the brook, and slotted a trap before getting home. A ten tossed away her lead. At the end of 27 holes the players stood: Vanderbeck, 136; Miss Gordon, 137, and Miss Collett, 138.

Each played exceeding well on the last nine reaching they had a chance to win. Mrs Vanderbeck was at Meadow 42 and Miss Collett 41. The final scores were Mrs Vanderbeck 174 Miss Collett 179 and Miss Gordon 180. Miss Collett got a four on the last hole in order to beat Miss Gordon for second place

Mrs Vanderbeck, the winner, is a member of the Philadelphia Cricket Club. She won the national championship at Brookline in 1915 and last year made the trip to England for the British women's championship. She says Miss Cecil Leitch is the hardest golfer she has ever met. Miss Leitch, national champion, also holds the British title.

The Princeton-Cup matches opened today at the Country Club with New York playing Philadelphia, Boston meets the losers of this match Thursday, and the winner Friday.

The Story So Far

Dick Quarren, a talented young man, lives in bachelor quarters with friends, all Am'ricellows. The house is known as the Irish Embassy. When the story opens Quarren's friends are discussing the return of one of his cheeks. They assert society has got a hold on him, and is making a nobody out of him. Westguard, who has accepted the check, calls Quarren's attention to it. The latter takes it light-heartedly, saying that he forgot to make a deposit. Mrs. Wycherly, a cousin of Westguard's, brings Strelsa Leeds, a fascinating young widow of scarcely twenty, to call. The men all fall in love with her. Quarren is taking a nap and does not see her.

SO this was Imogen Lee's wife —this demure, simply dressed young woman with the dreamy, violet eyes and the spun-gold hair! Why, she was a mere child! And as for the pose of her head and shoulders, it was simply adorable!

Quarren sat up, rubbing his eyes and wondering if he were dreaming. But in their grave, quiet depths there was no doubt. And the perfection of form and feature left no room for criticism.

Her hat, gown, furs were black—as though the tragic shadow of two years ago still lay across her slender body.

She looked around at the room. Molly Wycherly, pouring tea, nodded to Westguard. He rose and presented the cup to Mrs. Leeds.

She said something. And as the two women gossiped and men lounged, Quarren studied the young widow.

There was no doubt of it. Imogen's delicate beauty, the tragic loveliness of the Madonna, had been reincarnated in her.

The lieutenant who repeated, amused at the term —

"Our French ex, this house the Irish Legation," he explained. "We're all Irish by descent except Westguard, who's Hessenach—and Dick Quarren, who's a wolf hound."

"And who is Dick Quarren?" she asked innocently.

"Oh, he's the most wonderful fellow you ever knew!" Westguard began.

Quarren Described

"But I am ——"

He got up and stood looking down at the man in front of him, his face pale, his eyes candent. Quarren looked up again and laughed. "I don't know why Mr. Quarren is so much put about by Mr. Quarren's accidental presence," Mr. Lee said.

"But at last Mrs. Lee is here and I share the high honor of your hospitality. We are, as a matter of record, the two Fenian members of this establishment, so I suppose I am to be the guest of honor. Mr. Quarren, however, also has a special claim on Mrs. Lee. I——"

"What is Dick Quarren to you?" Mrs. Lee asked.

Every hair was in place. Molly Wycherly said:

"I heard Quarren say he knew you before he came to New York. Strelsa and I——"

"What I must have said!" Quarren thought. "Good heavens! I——"

"I was very angry indeed," Mrs. Lee said, "when I found that Mr. Quarren had been making love to me behind my husband's back. I——"

"Legation closed!" Lacy Marly, waiting at Mrs. Leeds' door, announced.

"MOLLY DAIEN is a quitter."

Elizabeth laughed as she interrupted. It was a guest to Helen. "She went all the way through the training school and then served as a nurse in France, and took up the career of nothing less than a husband."

"Why, Helen exclaimed, looking with interest at the matron. "Are you married, really?"

"I was," Molly Slater admitted calmly. "Married for just one year. That was quite enough for me."

Helen gasped. The speaker appeared young—almost of her own age. Could she have had such an experience as marriage, of course, her husband had died. But, if so, how would she——

Mrs. Slater's next remark checked Helen's surmises.

"I was a fool to marry a man I knew as little as I did Slater. I went on the impulse of a moment, to my best friend's wedding. She gave me a bouquet to throw, and I got my own. Slater was there, and I was glowing with happiness and I suppose I looked pretty. At any rate, he fell in love with me at first sight. My——"

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

You read of gold pouring into this country by the millions every week, and the news gives you a sort of satisfaction and pride that you are a citizen of so predominatingly strong a nation.

You also read, however, occasional items about Germany having underbid American steel manufacturers or locomotive builders for some big foreign order. You read, too, of the ability of Germany and some other European countries to manufacture goods at such a price that they can be sold here cheaper than American manufacturers can afford to sell them.

You have doubtless also read how our gigantic balance of exports over imports is now dwindling toward the vanishing point.

And you wonder about the why-fore and the wherefore of such happenings.

* * *

Now, we all get our bread and butter directly or indirectly through some sort of business. We all know that when business collapses hard times overtake the whole population.

Therefore it is natural that we should all be interested in business conditions and in seeing that this country adopts policies calculated to bring about business prosperity.

* * *

An international banker, familiar, from first-hand experience, with conditions in Europe and possessing full knowledge of what is going on under the surface here, yesterday analyzed things very carefully for the readers of this column. Here is what he said:

"The American dollar is today the most gold-inflated international exchange the world has ever seen.

"What are we going to do if we have the bulk of the world's gold supply and the rest of the world, still owing us billions, is put on a paper basis?

* * *

"A gold currency, or a silver currency or a paper currency can be maintained internationally and beneficially only if the other most important countries have the same currency. Today all countries are drifting away from the gold standard because of their abnormal indebtedness to the United States.

"The question then arises: Why are gold importations not stopped here? It is true that other countries with depreciated currencies will not be in a position to afford buying from us on account of our expensive dollar exchange!

* * *

"The question then suggests itself: 'If Europe should stop sending gold, how can they pay what they owe us?'

"The answer is that they should pay in merchandise and labor, as represented in manufactured articles.

"But then we come to this proposition: How can Europe possibly ship us enough merchandise to pay us all the billions they owe and the ever-accruing interest?

* * *

"In the interest of the United States their indebtedness must forthwith be closely examined and by the same taken that the Treaty of Versailles ordained that Germany should pay all she could, but no more than she could. America should expect Europe to pay all she can, but not more than she can.

* * *

"If it has become an axiom that Americans are shrewd business men, now, of all times, should we demonstrate that we deserve that reputation. If we don't, we shall drown the birthright of our entire nation in the flood of gold. The dollar exchange will keep on rising in the international exchanges and, conversely, European exchanges will go down to such depths that it will become quite apparent that the dollar having become so dear, practically unpurchasable, the debtors must lie down to their obligations.

* * *

"Our farmers and exporters are not in business for one year only; they must do business year-in, year-out, and they and their employes must be protected from the consequences of an unprecedented deadlock, for that is what we are confronted with.

* * *

"The sooner we people grapple with this flood of gold, the sooner we shall return to normal business conditions.

"Therefore, we would solemnly urge that further excessive gold importations be curbed; that Europe's financial affairs be arranged wisely; and, as a result, the best protection of our industries under the circumstances be furnished by improvement of the foreign exchanges, and for the higher the pound sterling and the franc and the guilder and the mark and the lira become more difficult it will become for countries with depreciated currencies to underbid and undersell us.

* * *

"If we don't stop gold importations, if we let foreign exchanges go to the intolerable depths, then they will all undersell us and drown us with their gold and goods."

* * *

The individual or the nation that adopts a do-nothing policy inevitably runs into difficulties, just as any machinery which is left to run itself gets out of order in course of time. We can't afford to sit idle and act the role of mere onlookers. We don't want our already terrifically large army of unemployed to be swelled by additional millions of unfortunate workers. It is high time to act, and act aggressively and decisively.

What are we going to do about it?

Stocks Heavy; Call Money Opens at 7%; Sterling Down

STEEL ISSUES ARE WEAK

Oils Off, While Motors and Tires Recede; List Rules Irregular

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, but had a heavy tone. Steels were showing losses, while motors and tires were down. The market weakened somewhat in the second hour, but had no definite trend during the morning. Call money opened at 7 per cent. Foreign exchange rates were lower, demand sterling opened at $3.78, off nearly four cents. The stock market was not so active as yesterday, first hour transactions totaling about 250,000 shares.

Republic Steel and White Motor sold at new 1921 lows. Among weakest issues were Crucible, Republic Steel, Bethlehem B, Mexican Petroleum, Pan American, Punta Alegre and American Woolen common. Strong issues were Canadian Pacific, United Fruit, Industrial Alcohol and Car and Foundry.

RECEDED AND RALLIED.

The opening was strong, gains being in a two-to-one ratio as compared with declines, but the first movement, due to overnight covering orders, was brief. Prices began to recede in volume and the market action was reversed within a few minutes. Specialties continued strong before the supply was absorbed and the list rallied. Early changes ruled small. Steels were steady with the exception of Crucible, which had a sensational setback. Oil issues also dropped more than a point, but a little later showed almost as much gain. Higher-priced oils were firm and low-priced ones were up at the outset. Rubber, leathers, coppers and sugars began with a good tone while rails and equipment ruled higher. Trading was of a professional character during the first hour. It seemed imbued with hesitation and the bear crowd paused for developments.

DEPRESSED BY RUMORS

The market has again been depressed by rumors and some of them related to an unfavorable situation developing in shipping. Without being definite about them, but their indefinite character caused as much apprehension as if there was back of something tangible to whisper. The rumors were largely responsible for the lowering of the call rate yesterday afternoon. The way standard investment issues have been selling off has been disturbing to investors in general, but there is a trend class and easily scared. News that Washington had settled upon a policy toward Mexico helped to restore confidence and, generally speaking, there was a better feeling in the Street this morning than for several days. The market is said to be heavily oversold and there is some urgent borrowing demand for many issues after the recent liquidation. International Sugar and United Fruit both loaned at 1-16 premium, Central Leather preferred at 1-32 and Crucible Steel offered at 2 per cent interest. Industrials generally loaned at 7-8 per cent, and railroads at 3-4 per cent.

Oil Output to Decrease

Regarding the oil outlook Henry L. Doherty, head of the Cities Service Co., says that while production and importation are running at practically the maximum amount in history, yet in April only 6,000,000 barrels went into storage. He said: "Fully one-third the production east of the Rockies is coming from wells drilled in the past year, and 50 per cent of from wells drilled the past two years. We are bound soon to have a failing off in production."

Less Money in Circulation

On June 1 this year the money in circulation in the United States totaled $5,983,218,292, or $53.43 per capita, as against $6,070,888,114, or $56.31 per capita a month ago and the first of this month the general stock of money amounted to $8,013,737,252.

Corporation Reports

The Lansing Co. reports for year to May 31 last, showed assets of $3,134,947 and liabilities, including $1,000,000 of 8 per cent preferred stock, of $2,134,947.

The first quarter of 1921 was creditable for the Fisk Rubber Co., which reported for 1920, besides profit and loss, surplus of $7,460,000. Net sales for the quarter were $8,582,281 besides.

Net profits for fiscal year the International Nickel Co. amounted to $7,726,000 after charges and taxes, equal to $7.72 on the 1,000,000 shares of common stock outstanding. The company operates a share per $25, earned on outstanding stock, amounting to $7,726,000, after charges of $2,745,754 or $1.32 a share in the previous year.

Net profits of the Lee Rubber Co. amounted to $11,202,722, a decrease of $15,122,000 from the preceding year, corresponding month of 1920. Five months' sales totaled $8,582,281, a decrease of $15,724,282, compared with 1920.

For 1920 the American Safety Razor Co. reported net profits of $2,646,754, against $346,754, equivalent to 48 cents a share, compared with $2,300,000, or $9.20 a share, in 1919.

Net income of the Middle States Oil Co. for the first quarter of this year amounted to $1,621,000, equal, after reserves and Federal taxes, to $1.07 a share, as compared with $2.89 a share earned in the first quarter of 1920.

City and County Loans

Hampden County, Mass., awarded to Wurlitz & Co. at 4.67 $250,000 3½ per cent highway improvement bonds, maturing $25,000 annually from 1922 to 1931, inclusive.

Rail Earnings

April operating revenues of the New York Central R. R. System increased $626,000 from April, 1920, to $29,000,000. Net operating income increased $500,000, but there was $225,722 decrease in operating income.

April gross of the St. Louis Southwestern Railway System was $1,000,000, a decrease of more than $52,722. Decreases from January 1 were respectively $1,146,098 and $500,336.

Colorado & Southern's receipts decreases, as follows: Fourth week of May, $136,000; month of May, $520,000; from January 1, $1,700,000.

Kansas City Southern in April gained $394,000 in gross and $278,000 in net, while gains from January 1 were $1,154,812 and $1,000,000.

For May the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railway's gross increased $1,000,000 to $3,000,000, against $999,974 in the previous year.

BETTER TONE IN HOME MARKET

Boston Prices Move Irregularly During the Forenoon; Dull Start for Curb

Stocks were irregular in price movement in Boston at the opening and all the forenoon. Trading was of usual breadth, which means it was contracted, and of average values which is small. Fluctuations were a little larger than they were yesterday morning. The tone of the market had improved, however. Libby was a weak issue, its directors having passed a semi-annual dividend. New Haven was the only rail dealt in during the first hour and gained a fraction. Coppers showed more strength, with the exception of Calumet and Arizona. It was active as well as weak. Mexican Investment was among the leaders. Units of from one to two points were made by Calumet and Hecla, Quincy, Osceola, United Fruit, United Drug common and Mexican Investment. Warren Brothers second preferred advanced 1 1-2 points on its first sale in some time. Pond Creek issues were sustained by Calumet and Arizona, Greenfield Tap, Amoskeag and Eastern Steamship common.

Among issues to make small gains were East Butte, Davis-Daly, New Haven, U. S. Smelting, American Woolen common, Shawmut, Swift International and Gray & Davis. Fractionally lower stocks included American Zinc, Lake Copper and Nipissing. Stocks to decline one point or more included Boston Elevated, Mullins, Mexican Petroleum, Utah Apex, Utah Consolidated, Victoria, Waldorf and Edison.

CURB MARKET MIXED.

The Curb market had a mixed opening and was very quiet at the start. It remained irregular all the morning. Leaders were Crystal, Mutual and Eureka. Among issues to open higher were Arizona Tip Top, Eureka, Mutual, Sierra Silver and United Verde Extension. Stocks to decline at once included Boston Bly, Hecla Divide, Palisade and Randolph.

At the end of an hour Crystal was up 2 cents at 28 cents and Mutual 2 cents at 28 cents. Declines included Boston Bly, down 15 cents and United Verde Extension 1 at 25. Eureka had lost its gain.

The One and Only Reason for Biggest Navy Afloat

We Must Maintain a Great Armament to Prevent Defeat in Case of War

Copyright, 1921, Star Company.

Disarmament will not prevent war. Neither will armaments. The only reason for our nation maintaining a great naval armament is not to prevent war, but to prevent invasion and defeat in case of war.

Wars will not cease until strong nations, of their own accord, cease to hold weaker peoples in subjection.

Whenever England, France, Italy and Japan are ready to let the peoples of Ireland, Egypt, India, Morocco, Algiers, Alsace-Lorraine, Cochin China, Korea, Eastern Siberia, Shantung, Mongolia, Manchuria and other conquered dependencies have liberty and independence, the end of wars will be in sight.

Even the clergy and the ladies will then cease to shout for joy over the killing, maiming and starvation of millions of men, women and children in some other land, because there will be no wholesale slaughter of human beings to stir the worshippers of the Prince of Peace to delight and frenzy.

Governments make wars to gain territory, trade and power. Once the principal governments renounce that kind of profiteering wars will cease.

Until that time the only safety for a rich nation from attack and spoliation is prepared defence.

The principal governments of the world are rich and powerful because they have been successful thieves of other people's liberties and possessions.

Our associates in the late war are not a bit better in this respect than were our enemies.

Talk of the war having been a war between autocracy and "the free peoples" is no longer in fashion even in England, whence our war styles of talk came.

The original combination against the Central Empires consisted of England, France, Russia and Japan—one monarchy, one republic and the two worst and most despotic autocracies the world has ever seen.

To speak of the subjects of the Czar and the Mikado as "free peoples" is ridiculous.

And in subjugating, exploiting and hardily and cruelly ruling weaker peoples, the so-called democratic governments of England and France have a worse record in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries than even the Japanese and the defunct Russian despotisms.

Sensible men are not deceived by catch phrases or by simulated virtue. They look facts in the face and estimate them as they are. And they judge the future by the past.

That is why sensible men are profoundly convinced that we Americans should build and maintain a navy capable of defending our land against the assaults of any one or any two or any other number of these notoriously greedy, exploiting, untrustworthy European and Asiatic governments, which have all bankrupted themselves in a badly calculated attempt to steal from one another, and whose fleets and armies would be headed toward America any time they were sure they could plunder our land of its riches without too much loss to themselves.

The time to disarm our sea defences will be the time when Japan and the principal European powers restore the possessions and the liberties of the weak peoples, and reduce to a minimum their own huge armies and powerful fleets.

Until that time we should build ships and ships and ships, till we have the biggest navy afloat.

That is our only insurance policy, and it is worth the price.

Filipinos Realize What U. S. Protection Means to Them

News comes from the Philippine Islands that the native business men there have organized to protest against America's releasing the Philippine Islands to the absolute control of its own inhabitants for a little while yet.

These business men feel that in the unsettled state of the world it would be better for the Filipinos to exercise the home rule which they now have under the international protection of the United States, than to be left alone to paddle their own canoe in the stormy waters of the far Pacific, which are within the sphere of Japanese influence.

Of course, back of this request, is the terror which all the peoples in the Pacific have of Japanese imperialism and colonization. They fear the great influx of Japanese overflowing from Japan's teeming population, and they fear that they are not strong enough to take the same attitude towards this immigration which America and the white races bordering on the Pacific now take. So they want to stay with the United States, and be under our protecting arm a little longer, until Japan's status in the Pacific is definitely fixed.

It is easy for these Filipinos to make this request because they are really giving up very little of self-respect, self-government and interest by remaining in association with the United States. What we have been able to do and what we have done for the Filipinos shows what a great nation with white civilization can do even with a primitive, barbaric people, within one generation, and it puts to shame the claims of Great Britain to be a great and beneficent colonizer or governor of dependent peoples.

What has been the result of English rule in India? She deliberately destroyed the educational institutions of India for the purpose of making the people ignorant and helpless under her domination, and she did her work so well that today only six people in a hundred can read and write in India, while, when India was under the government of her own people, sixty-six out of every hundred could read and write.

That is the difference between American treatment of helpless people, and British treatment. That is an example of the way a backward people can be raised to its feet and a progressive, prosperous people can be destroyed.

THE Panama Canal, greatest engineering work of man, was built with American brains and $375,000,000 of good American money. It was intended to let American commerce have the benefit of quick, free passage between the oceans.

Then came the Wilson administration, super-friendly to our chief maritime rival, Great Britain, and persuaded a gullible Congress to put tolls on our American ships.

That was fine for Britain, but very unfair for Americans.

It is time to undo this mistake. Mr. McCay shows how.

Cultured Pearl No Mystery

By Universal Service.

LONDON, June 8.—The story of the "cultured pearl" has been exploded. The jewel merchants of Hatton Garden have written "finis" to the story. There was no mystery in the plot after all; it was only light reading like the tale of the perennial sea serpent.

A meeting of pearl merchants, especially convened to deal with the report that Japanese cultured pearls could not be distinguished from natural pearls, has decided that no measures are necessary to protect the trade from the importation of the cultured gems.

Hatton Garden has pronounced a collective judgment, which may be summarized thus:

Cultivated pearls have had no more effect on the market value of the real product than dead oysters.

X-ray tests for pearls are farcical.

Nothing is needed to tell the difference between cultivated and natural pearls except the intuitive skill of the trained expert.

Demonstrations to show how easily cultivated pearls can be detected have been given in Hatton Garden. A number of the best obtainable Japanese pearls were mixed with natural pearls and placed before dealers, and in not a single instance was a mistake made.

It is interesting to note that cultivated pearls have been obtained by the Chinese from mussels. They produce them in all sorts of weird shapes by introducing a metal mould into the mussel, which then coats the metal with pearl substance.

Little pearl Buddhas are made in this way.

Love Is Waking in the Hearts of Men

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit—is strongest. Evils that take leave
On their departure most of all evils show.
SHAKESPEARE.

THE roar of cannon, the hiss of shell,
The tread of armies, the battle yell,
And God's voice answering, "All is well!"

Ay! All is well! This mighty sound of war,
Which echoes and rebounds from sea to sea,
Is but the great crescendo at the close.
A few more crashing chords, a final burst
Of loud staccatos—then the hush of peace.
The world's best thought has grown ashamed of war,
Where once it was the glory of mankind,
And warriors now seem like the player-folk,
Without the players' talent and excuse,
Tricked out in costumes, strutting with false airs,
A part and parcel of a passing show.
Ignoble envies and malicious spites,
Unmanly strifes for precedence and praise,
False standards and ambitions based on self—
These things are bred by military life.
The wise, progressive world will do away
With armies and with wars, for they belong
To untaught nations and disordered times.
The grand new creed of kindness must prevail,
For Love is waking in the hearts of men.

The roar of cannon, the hiss of shell,
The tread of armies, the battle yell,
And God's voice answering, "All is well!"

Appreciate Hospitality

"IT'S always such a pleasure to attend one of the 'affairs' that Mrs. Boner is so fond of arranging."

"It seems to me they are horribly dull."

"Yes, they are; but think of the fun one has talking about her stupidity and the absurd people she manages to have around her."

QUESTION OF MOON AS DEAD WORLD

By Garrett P. Serviss.

SEVERAL correspondents, women as well as men, have lately expressed great interest in the old question of the habitability of the moon. Just what has awakened their curiosity on this subject I do not know, but, as so often happens, many minds appear simultaneously to have caught the same floating idea.

Evidently there lurks behind these inquiries a strong desire to find some ground for believing that the moon is not a "dead world," but that, on the contrary, it may be the abode of very interesting creatures.

One correspondent says: "Is it reasonable to suppose that because our scientists have no conception of life above and below certain degrees of temperature, life could not exist on a planet whose temperature does not, in any way, conform to ours?"

Earthly Comparison

Our science, having no knowledge of any forms of life except such as are found to inhabit the earth, would be untrue to its own principles if, in any inquiry about the possible existence of living beings on other worlds it did not assume that such beings must possess surroundings compatible with what we know to be essential to the existence of life on this globe. We have absolutely no other terms of comparison and no other facts to judge by.

But that we are justified in applying these terrestrial standards to other worlds is clear in view of the fact that, although we cannot perceive the effects of the presence of life on other planets, we do perceive that those planets obey all the physical laws that govern the earth. The moon obviously obeys the law of gravitation, as do all of the planets. The moon, like every planet, is a globe, as the earth is. All of them alike travel around the sun and receive and reflect its light and heat. Most of them obviously have atmospheres which resemble the atmosphere of the earth. There are overwhelming reasons for believing that all are composed of similar chemical elements and that chemical laws are the same on them as on the earth.

Absence of Air

The absence of an atmosphere entails another consequence which our experience shows to be fatal to life, i. e., extreme contrasts of temperature.

All of these things are directly contradictory to the hypothesis of the habitability of the moon.

But I am perfectly willing to admit that this to "earth-bound" knowledge and that a visit to the moon might furnish a rebuke to human presumption. But until such a visit is paid science will leave the peopling of the moon to the imagination.

Letters to the Editor

Wholesale Profiteering

Editor Boston American:

It has come to my attention that our ice cream parlors, lunch rooms and drugstores in Boston and suburban towns and cities are charging two to four cents more for tonics, sodas and ice cream than such drug bonanzas in the city of New York. When will conservative and progressive dispensers of such liquids find frozen cream snap out of their dreams and realize that the war is over and that they should move backward to honest prices? Our public servants, elected at the ballot box by the people to represent the people and their interests, should look into such profiteering, and do it NOW. I think a campaign should be started against such gouging and diabolical business principle.

Importing Orphans

Editor Boston American:

A few days ago I read that fifteen British orphans were brought over to America to be adopted by American families and that so many women applied for them that the women who brought them over promised to bring more by the last of June. Now, my question is: "Does anyone think that is fair to our American orphans?" No! It is not right, and it should be stopped! There is an old saying that "Charity begins at home." It really ought to, but it seldom does. When the orphan homes in the United States are empty, then it is time to bring them from across.

ARE WOMEN FREE IN THE IDEAL SENSE?

By Dr. Charles Fleischer.

Copyright, 1921, by Premier Syndicate, Inc.

WE are prone to think of men and women as though they were beings of different species. This because of exaggeration of sex.

Beneath sex flows our common human nature, seeking expression through democracy. Only cynical might on the part of man and parasitic self-depreciation on the part of woman can prevent woman's achievement of normal human status.

Here, now, comes the National Women's Party and demands that full political equality in practice which would appear to be guaranteed in theory by the recently enacted amendment to the Federal Constitution.

It wants for women not only the right to vote but the privilege of being voted for. Of course! Why not?

Probably the men are much nearer conversion on that score—as they were regarding equal suffrage—than are the women themselves.

One of our big democratic problems is to rouse enough civic sense in the minds of the masses of women to assure their active participation in the political and general life of the nation.

That means not merely voting, but full awakening to social responsibility.

Full Atonement

Beyond the ballot is the vast social, human task of rescuing and using the great store of obvious worth and of potential, serviceable energy which the race has stupidly lost through the repression of the life of woman.

For the suppression of womankind men have a long and full atonement to make. Flattery is no part of that reparation.

It is idle, for instance, to glorify motherhood as such. As though motherhood were woman's sole function—and as though that splendid fact were sufficient to absolve the hosts of women from further human responsibility!

The father is quite as important, biologically and spiritually, toward parenthood—seeing that almost all children have a habit of selecting two parents!

Her Readiness

Among other revelations of the war stands out the shining discovery of the ability and readiness of woman to respond to all the new and varied demands suddenly made upon her.

She has shown herself able to play the man's game—and her own as well.

Incidentally, too, disclosing what easy-going fakirs most men are, and how "stuff" are many of the jobs for which the "superior sex" had calmly declared women to be unfitted.

It is sad enough that, as human beings, women share with men the cruel, needless handicaps which have prevented freedom and progress, without imposing upon the female portion of humanity the additional restrictions of law and custom which still enslave them and, by that token, fetter and impoverish the race.

In every way we must move—not only for the sake of justice to woman, but out of intelligent concern for human nature and social welfare—toward the complete emancipation of woman.

For Common Good

Granting the ballot was only a part of that process, being a democratic symbol of social status, a sign of the voter's power and part in the making of the laws which govern all.

In all personal intercourse and social functioning, in all the varied life of human affairs—whether in the casual touch-and-go of superficial relations or in the potential sanctity of marital intimacy, whether in political privilege or in economic opportunity—men and women must co-operate, for the sake of the common human good, toward the complete freeing of half of our race from all the traditional handicaps and restraints which have hitherto prevented the normal humanness of women.

Democracy has its dogma on this score.

Democracy recognizes the inviolable sanctity of every individual—female or male.

Every abrogation of individuality —whether by law or custom or self-denial—means the loss of essential freedom and the violation of personal integrity.

By this ideal standard of spiritual democracy how many women are free?

And how many men?
